Sunol PO faces new $$ threat

A new economic squeeze on the nation's postal service would appear to threaten post offices of the size now serving the village of Sunol, but there is no immediate prospect that a recommendation to close such offices will result in hasty action.

The General Accounting Office and the postmaster general have come up with figures showing losses of $160 million each year on second and third class post offices. Most of those small stations could be shut down "with no resulting loss in service to the public," the GAO believes. The study goes on to examine all rural service throughout the nation, including 6100 fourth class offices, and 12,190 third class stations — of which Sunol, California is one.

Dublin's post office wbuld not appear to be threatened by this latest cost-cutting move, because it is operated as a branch out of Pleasanton, which has a first class office. The Pleasanton PO also operates two rural routes — along Foothill Dublin to Sunol and along Interstate 580, while Livermore post office has rural routes reaching around that urban center.

"There is always talk of cutting back unprofitable service," was the response of Pleasanton Postmaster Marc Foster, "but they forget we are here to render an important public service, whether we make money or not."

Impasse in Murray teacher bargaining

The Certificated Employes Council (CEC), representing teachers in the Murray Elementary School District (MESD), has formally declared an impasse in salary and fringe benefits negotiations and requested a fact finding process take place immediately.

Agreement was tentatively reached to extend the teachers' present dental insurance plan before talks broke off at Thursday's meet and confer session. The teachers wanted the plan renewed under the same insurance company, while the district suggested transferring to another company to maintain last year's premium cost to teachers with comparable coverage.

The MESD Board's representative agreed to continue the old contract and increase the teachers' premiums by $3.60 per month to each teacher.

The CEC then presented a new counterproposal calling for $205,000 including a four per cent teacher salary increase with the remainder aimed toward increased instructional materials for the classroom.

In an earlier proposal, the Board offered $205,000 to the CEC for salary increases because it apparently thought the CEC was the bargaining agent for all employes.

The CEC accepted this offer for teacher salaries only, since it does not represent any other group. The Board then withdrew the offer and negotiations have since stalled.

The Board said it welcomes a fact finding procedure and has in fact urged such a process for the past two meetings. "We are looking forward to it. We are very confident of the budget we have developed," said MESD Superintendent Don Williams.

The CEC and the Board must select a representative for the fact finding panel by Friday, June 13. They must not have served earlier as representatives of either party to qualify, but are considered interested parties.

A joint statement listing the facts to be determined the fact finding process must be posted within ten days of their selection, or June 23.

This list will be submitted to a disinterested third party selected by the two representatives. If they cannot agree on a third person, a dean of a department of education will be chosen from Cal State Hayward. — by Bill Cauble

Obstacles block VCSD expansion of its sewage treatment capacity

With millions of dollars in suits, lots of angry developers and the City of Pleasanton hanging over its head, it would seem that the Valley Community Services District would be well advised to expand its sewer plant to 8 million gallons a day as soon as possible.

"We'd be glad to" VCSD General Manager Paul Ryan has said on many occasions but first he must deal with the formidable obstacles that stand in the district's way.

The first — and easiest — problem to solve is the Hopyard Road sewer line. That line was to be repaired by the City of Pleasanton early this year but due to unforeseen difficulties the line is still leaking.

As long as it leaks, VCSD cannot bring its sewage treatment capacity up to 4 million gallons a day (mgd). However, as soon as Pleasanton repairs the line, VCSD is ready to go before the California Regional Water Quality Control Board and ask permission to expand its treatment capacity to 4.3 mgd.

That amount is way below the 8 mgd the VCSD was forced to apply for as a result of the 1972 court settlement, but it is all that Ryan and Public Works Director Doug Nelson feel the district can handle and still maintain discharge requirements set up by the Regional Water Quality Control Board (RWQCB).

VCSD presently has the plant staffed to service 5 mgd of sewage and is wasting capacity by not processing that much. The plant is designed so that a certain number of people are required to run it whether the flow is 3.8 mgd (as it is now) or 5 mgd. Thus VCSD is as interested as everyone else in pushing capacity of the plant up as soon as possible.

However, RWQCB has a new weapon to insure that dischargers live up to its standards. The Environmental Protection Agency now licenses sewage plants and the terms of permit set up substantial penalties if the standards are not met.

"No one has been penalized yet" said Nelson "but I certainly don't want to be the first one taken to court."

The problem that VCSD faces involves total dissolved solids (TDS). These materials, which are present in drinking water in the valley up to 450 parts per million (ppm), cannot exceed 851 ppm when discharged from the plant. That amounts to 28,400 pounds a day of total dissolved solids.

That material is flushed into the Alamo Canal and thence into the Alameda Creek water system and eventually is used by residents of Fremont and Newark for drinking water.

Faced with the 851 ppm limit, VCSD cannot expand beyond 4.3 mgd unless it goes through prohibitively expensive demineralization procedures. The equipment necessary to demineralize enough water would cost millions of dollars and no federal or state agency would help fund that machinery.

Another alternative is land discharge, as practiced by Livermore and Pleasanton. However, even now the United States Geological Survey (USGS) is setting up a system of test wells in the valley to determine if the land disposal by the two cities is contaminating the ground water.

For VCSD to discharge even .25 mgd of effluent on land would require approval from an impressive array of agencies ranging from Zone 7 and RWQCB to the EPA and the USGS.

And there are other materials that VCSD must monitor. Settleable material (material that will settle in water by gravity after an hour) must not exceed 1 ppm and suspended solids (material that will not settle) cannot exceed 5 ppm.

And although VCSD has one of the most modern and pleasant plants in California, it appears that without expensive and extensive alterations, the plant will not be able to meet RWQCB standards for TDS and process more than 4.3 mgd of sewage.

Pleasanton and the developers, of course, are demanding that VCSD handle at least 6.5 mgd and preferably 8 mgd. Exactly how that will be done, however, remains a mystery.

Sheriff clears up Santa Rita ID rule

The crisis at the Santa Rita Gate, which was never officially there, has now been officially removed. And as a result, unsuspecting visitors to that county prison may enter and leave those grounds without fear of detention and arrest for some long-forgotten traffic citation.

What started as one valley lawyer's complaint, and almost ballooned into a formal request for action by the Civil Liberties Union "in order to safeguard our constitutional rights," was quickly and quietly dealt with at week's end.

"I know of no such policy, and if there was such a practice going on, then it will not occur again," Sheriff Tom L. Houchins told The Times, adding however, "except in selected instances."

The "practice" that was never officially there, and had the valley's attorneys disturbed, was that which required any visitor into the Santa Rita Rehabilitation Center to surrender that person's driver's license upon entering the grounds. The license was thereupon "routinely checked by computer," and if an outstanding warrant for some past transgression turned up, then the visitor was arrested on the spot.

William Struthers was the first valley attorney to uncover this "invasion of rights," and he brought the matter before a Friday meeting of the Livermore-Amador Bar Association. Struthers also fired off a letter to Sheriff Houchins, protesting the procedure as "unfair to the general public."

The Times contacted Sheriff Houchins, and learned that he was ordering an end to the practice that never existed in the first place, at least not in Sheriff Houchins' official view.

"There might be selected checks of driver's licenses," Houchins acknowledged, "but only in instances where the officer on duty recognizes a person he suspects might have an outstanding warrant against that individual."

The sheriff acknowledged, however, that it was just such a case of "checking a person's driver's license for possible outstanding warrants" that got Angela Davis into such a flap with the county police at Highland Hospital recently. Angela was "detained" following that "routine check" at Highland, and as a result she is "suing the county and myself for $50,000," Houchins reported.

But for now the Valley Bar Association sees no such problem.

Correction on Granada graduation

LIVERMORE — Thursday's Time's erroneously listed graduation exercises for Granada High School on Thursday, June 12, at 6 p.m. nn the athletic field.

The article should have said the ceremonies will be held Friday, June 13, at the same time and place.

Livermore High School's program will begin on the field at 7 p.m. that evening.

Parking on Main nixed for repair

PLEASANTON — The cure hopefully will not be as bad as the desease next week when parking is prohibited along Main Street during the scheduled Monday and Tuesday resurfacing.

Work will begin at the bridge over the Arroyo del Valle and proceed south along the west side of the street, according to Director of Field Services Arnold Eaton.

The east side of the Main Street will be repaved Tuesday.

Eaton "regret(s) having to eliminate parking along Main Street, but it's the only way it will work and allow traffic to flow."

Two lanes of traffic will be kept open, he emphasized while apologizing to the merchants for the lack of parking.

"It'll be a much smoother ride when it's finished," he added.

Work is being done by the East Bay Excavating Company at a cost of $31,000.

I flew the Goodyear blimp and lived to tell about it!

By KAREL KRAMER

EDITOR'S NOTE: Our reporter accompanied 25 members of the Livermore Rotary Club to the 18th annual Fly-In held at the Nut Tree Airport last week, where the Goodyear blimp was docked. Special thanks to Norm Clark, FAA tower chief at the Livermore Airport and pilot of the plane our reporter flew in, and passengers Gene Maestas, airport supervisor and PG&E's Dick Wright — all of whom arrived back in Livermore two hours late so our reporter could cover this special assignment. A very special thanks to John Shirley, Fly-In chairman, who won a ride on the blimp for Livermore's large attendance at the event, for so readily relinquishing his prize to our pleading reporter.

I spent the night before the Fly-In carefully studying photographs in "The Best of Life" of the "Hindenburg" at the moment it burst into flames, killing 36 passengers aboard (7:23 p.m., May 6, 1937, Lakehurst, N.J.).

At the time, my wildest hope only was to take a ride on the Goodyear blimp but since I ended up actually flying the aircraft, my research was not in vain.

The safety of the blimp was one of the topics touched on by Goodyear's chief pilot, Nick Nicolary, in his after-lunch address to the Rotarians. Piloting errors result in the craft's ascent, not descent, he explained, and just about the only thing that would knock the blimp out of the sky would be a five-foot diameter hole in the airship. Smaller holes often take days even to discover.

I wasn't fooled.

Nicolary also spoke about how slowly the blimp traveled (it took more than seven hours to arrive at the Nut Tree from Fresno, and that was fast) and how an unexpected wind could blow flight plans apart.

"Some people go up for a half-hour ride and return five hours later," he said. Laughter in the room and panic in my heart followed his statement.

After lunch, I and my five fellow passengers boarded a van which would take us to the blimp. One of the pilots, steering us into the vehicle, looked at us and shook his head. "You folks sure you want to do this, huh," he asked. Laughter. Mine weak.

Once in the aircraft, the sand bags holding it down were released and the sheer strength of six men on two ropes — one on each front side of the blimp — kept it down while Captain Joel Chamberlain got ready to lift off.

"Be advised that the Goodyear blimp is about to go airbound," announced a static female voice over the radio to the infinite number of small planes circling the airport.

My God, I thought, what if one of those pilots doesn't hear the warning and flies right into us. Would that make a five-foot diameter hole?

Chamberlain kept fiddling with two knobs, one labeled "open" and the other labeled "close" while I kept wishing he's make up his mind. Evidentally he did because the next thing I knew there was a deafening noise and we were going straight up (I later found out we were at a 50 to 55 degree angle) and I was struggling against gravity to get up and take a picture of our rather rapid take off.

As I did so, I realized there were no safety belts. What kind of plane was this, anyway?

Once airborne and level at 1,000 feet, the passenger next to the captain asked if he could fly the blimp. Fifteen seconds of instructions followed, with Chamberlain saying something about be sure and keep the needle here, and then they switched places.

(During his speech, Nicolary told the Rotarians the Goodyear training program required pilots to have 200 hours in the ship. "It takes 200 hours so they can experience all different conditions. No two flights ever are the same in her," he explained.)

So what's with this 15 seconds of instructions?

The rookie blimp pilot obviously did something with the craft because it started leaning to the left. I started leaning to the right.

"Is he a pilot," I politely asked, barely trying to conceal the hysteria in my voice. "Yes," I was assured. "There's no big problem flying a blimp in the air," Chamberlain told me.

Why the 200 hours then? I kept the question to myself.

"Anyone else here want to try," asked the captain, being the perfect host. Another Sky King volunteered, the 15-second lesson ensued and this time the blimp leaned to the right. I leaned to the left. "How about you," the captain asked, looking at ME.

"I can't fly," I confessed.

"Can you drive?"

"Just barely."

"You can do it," he said and gave me the 15-second special.

"Just press the floor peddle on the left to make the blimp go left and this peddle on the right to make it go right. Steer this wheel forward if you want to go down and back if you want to go up."

"That's four things," I pointed out. "I'll do the right and left and you do the up and down." (He never did say anything about the needle. Perhaps he figured a fifth thing would only confuse me).

And — I still don't believe it — I got in the pilot's seat and immediately began shaking — which I still believe.

"Press the left peddle," Chamberlain said. I gently applied my toe with all the strength I could muster.

"Harder." I tried but found it difficult since my knees were shaking violently.

"Harder." I pressed harder, the peddle slid forward and the blimp went toward the left. I didn't have the presence of mind to lean to the right. Instead, I screamed and clutched the captain's hand, despite the fact we'd never been formally introduced and it was the hand guiding the wheel.

Gales of laughter were emitted from the back seats. The pilot rather enjoyed it too and the entire performance was repeated for the right foot and leanings.

"That's it," I said and scrambled out of the pilot's seat, remembering to politely thank both the captain and my fellow passengers, all of whom still were laughing, for their brave indulgence.

What's the matter with them, I wondered. Don't they realize their lives were in danger?

Later, safe on the ground and home, I triumphantly told the incredible story of my flying adventure to my husband.

"You're kidding. Didn't those guys realize their lives were in danger," he exclaimed.

Livermore police nab two drug case suspects

LIVERMORE — A week-long surveillance at a store-it-yourself wharehouse netted police two suspected members of a "syndicated organization" allegedly supplying marijuana throughout California, but failed to turn up an expected "multi-thousand pound" shipment of Mexican weed destined for distribution from Modesto to the EastBay, Friday.

Undercover agents from Stanislaus County contacted local police last Friday and tipped them off to "a large amount of marijuana" stored at the Hudka Mini-Wharehouse Co, 4189 First St., Livermore detective Dan Killeen said.

The syndicate has been under investigation for two years, he added.

Positive identification of the storage bin's users was made with the cooperation of Hudka employes, who were "not involved in any way," Killeen continued, and a search warrant obtained after federal customs' dogs "sniffed out" marijuana.

Last Sunday noon some 200-pounds of marijuana, street-valued at $40,000 was seized from bin 212 of the wharehouse. No arrests were made.

Local police staked-out the site with a wire trip conneeted to headquarters, and waited for the expected shipment from Mexico.

Shortly before 8 a.m., Friday, Gary Eugene McBride, 25, and Sherry Jean Hill, 22, allegedly backed a trailer up to the bin and opened the door, setting off the alarm.

Police arrived "in less than two minutes," Killeen said, just as McBride and Hill, both of 1229 Frederick St., San Luis Obispo, were opening the storage shed door to leave.

Police are required to post a copy of the warrant when no one is present during a search, and Killeen says the two apparently opened the door, saw the warrant and when they opened the door to leave were met by 10 fully armed officers in five squad cars.

Stanislaus sheriffs told local police that some members of the syndicate were known to be armed.

Police were disappointed, however, when the truck was found empty.

They had expected a "multi-thousand pound" delivery of marijuana at the shed, but the duo apparently was sent to pick up the 200-pound block.

Police believe the syndicate "knew the heat was on," Killeen said, and diverted the shipment to one of the many wharehouses they apparently hold throughout the state.

The syndicate operates throughout California, he continued, and is based in Stanilaus County. An earlier arrest of one of its members netted "more than a ton of marijuana."

Charges will be filed in both a state and federal conspiracy case, Killeen said.

No further arrests are expected within this Valley, however.

McBride and Hill "immediately submitted to arrest with no problem at all," and were held in Livermore City Jail in lieu of $3,000 bail, each, on charges of possession of marijuana for sale.

Neither gave police a statement.

Raymond launches political drive

LIVERMORE — Valerie Raymond will formally launch her second bid for the First Supervisorial District post of Alameda County this Sunday with a "Hat In The Ring" party at the home of Herman and Marge Leider.

Ms. Raymond was unsuccessful in her challenge of Supervisor John D. Murphy's incumbency in 1972, although she did carry Livermore and scored surprisingly well in parts of Pleasanton and Dublin — Murphy's home base.

Murphy has given no indication of his plans for a possible fifth term on the county board. He is the senior member of that panel in terms of service, including two terms as chairman of the board.

Ms. Raymond, a resident of Livermore's rural south side, has been closely identified with environmental causes over the last several years.

While she is the first candidate to formally declare her candidacy for the First District post, Ms. Raymond is expected to be just one member of a large field of contenders from both sides of the Hayward hills, particularly should Murphy decline to run again. The first test comes with the June primaries next year, with the leading vote gatherers — should no candidate garner more than half the total votes cast — running off in November.

Raymond's Sunday wine tasting party will be from 4 until 7 p.m. at 1091 Batavia in Livermore.

Water unit to meet

LIVERMORE — The Livermore-Amador Valley Water Management Agency will begin the selection process for a water management facility at a meeting Tuesday evening.

The LAVWMA board has been considering various alternatives, including a reservoir and a pipeline to hook up with the East Bay Dischargers' Authority pipe.

The discussion of the "best apparent facility" will be one of two major decision LAVWMA will have to make. The second decision will be the size of that facility. Some members of the board believe it should be sized only to handle present needs while others think it should be constructed so as to allow growth in the future.

LAVWMA will also consider approval of an agreement with the United States Geologic Services surface water monitoring program for the 1975-76 fiscal year and will review the status of designation of an agency for wastewater management for the Alameda Breek Watershed.

LAVWMA will meet at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the Rincon School multi-purpose room, 1251 Rincon Ave.

Young find sentimental value in old collectables, says local antique dealer lifestyle

BY LILLY AULT

"In order for an item to qualify as an antique," explains Sue Hacker of the new Caboose Antique store in Pleasanton, "it has to be at least 100 years old. However, just because it is old doesn't mean it's a 'good' antique. Anything under that age is considered a 'collector's item.' "

Before going into the antique business, Sue was in the interior decorating profession. With her interior decorating experience and her antique knowledge she is a great help in integrating antique pieces into home decor.

"Antiques should not just sit around to be stared at," Sue remarked. "They should be a useful item in the household. I have lived with antiques all my life and have raised five children with little harm done to my 'precious' pieces. Children learn and grow to appreciate antiques."

Good antiques are recognized by their construction, design, finish, and wood, according to Sue. Oak is very big right now. Sue has some pieces from New England of cherry and pine and can't sell them.

"Every area has its own likes and dislikes when it comes to antiques," Sue said. "I could take the cherry and pine pieces to another location, and they would sell very quickly.

"Young married people are very interested in purchasing antique furniture for their homes instead of the modern furnishings," Sue observes. "They are will aware of the fact that the construction of antique furniture is so much better than the modern pieces. They are also cognizant that the antique value is there and that it is continuously appreciating."

Pleasanton antique dealer Sue Hacker proves that the Victrola in her new shop is still in working order to Valeria Scott, and Marty Wadkamper (with son Doug), new president of the Pleasanton Newcomers. Valeria is in the process of organizing an antique in Pleasahton.

Antiques are becoming more and more difficult to find and the price is increasing steadily, just like everything else, she stated. "If a young couple is interested in a particular price of furniture, no matter where they may see it, I encourage them to buy it right away or to make some type of committment or else, when they return to get that particular piece, they will find that it is gone."

One thing about antique furniture," Sue continued, "is that you can't call the manufacturer and ask for another order. Once that piece is gone, it is gone. The antique business is a waiting business."

Sue considered herself the "lay-away queen" when she started into collecting antiques at the age of 14. "Like most people, I just wouldn't have the full price and I knew I had to have that particular piece so I would put a few dollars down, at that time that was 25 percent of the price, and work to pay for the rest."

Sue is fully aware that most antique pieces can be big, heavy and bulky for the homes built today have much smaller rooms and lower ceilings. When shopping, she keeps this in mind in order to concentrate on the height, depth, weight as well as the carving, so the piece will be suitable for the smaller home of today.

What was once carried off to the dumps as "junk" is now being eyed and saved by the younger generation. Some of these pieces may not necessarily be antiques, according to Sue, but most of it carries sentimental value. This makes it fall into the category of being a "collectable."

"This can be just as interesting a collection since many young people want to have some touch with the past, be it mother, grandmother, aunt, or whatever relative," stated Sue.

"These items will never be of a fantastic value, but would be of great interest through the aspect of cost," she said. "What cost 10 or 20 cents could possibly be costing in the neighborhood of four or five dollars now. Such items as kitchen utensils, molds, books, etc. fall into the "collectables."

Sue has four daughters and one son, all of whom are interested in antiques and have decorated their home or a particular room to a certain era. "You can walk into that room or house and feel you are right back in that period of life," Sue proudly stated.

Before moving to Pleasanton, the Hackers lived in Southern California in the Granada Hills. Misfortune met with them. Their home burned and Sue lost many, many irreplaceable antiques. "I was just happy we got out of the home safely and was not the least bit concerned about my loss; however, every now and then I think about it and feel badly, but our life is still more important," she related. Sue's mother and father were also great antique collectors, so dealing in antiques comes very naturally for Sue. Her husband also enjoys the items, but Sue is entirely on her own in the shop.

After retiring from the interior business, she became bored and missed not being with people; therefore, she decided she would open an antique shop. She was located in Sunol for a year prior to moving to Pleasanton.

"Near Spring and through the gate," is Sue's lyric when telling persons how to find her unique shop, which is located at 706 Main Street. Store hours are 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday. If a customer is looking for a certain antique piece, Sue will take the effort to try to locate it for them.

Antiques are now a way of life for Sue; and although she does not consider herself an expert in the field, she is well informed on the subject.

Kissin third in State 2 mile

SAN DIEGO — "Given the day and the conditions I've had to put up with, I'm really pleased with my performance," said Roy Kissin of San Ramon High after a well-calculated 8:56.2 two mile run, good for third place at the State Track and Field Championships here yesterday.

Kissin entered the final lap in fourth place, but kicked home in 63.4, catching Mitch Kingery of San Carlos with 20 yards to go.

However, there was no catching Eric Hulst of Laguna Beach and Ralph Serna of Lorara (Anaheim).

Hulst's winning time was 8:44.9, a new state record. Runner-up Serna also eclipsed the previous record of 8:46.5, set by De La Salle's Rich Kimball in 1974.

Hulst set a quick pace, covering the first mile in 4:20 with Serna and Kingery directly behind him.

Kissin came through in 4:23.5, in eighth position. "When I heard 4:23 I started thinking conservatively," he said later. "It was unbelievable. I was barely in the top ten with 4:23!"

Though he eased up just a bit during the next half mile, Roy passed two runners and showed 6:43 for a mile and-a-half. But by now, he was eight seconds behind the leaders.

Hulst and Serna moved away from Kingery in the seventh lap, and Kissin began closing on third place. He trailed Kingery by a good 30 yards going into the final quarter.

"I was a little dissatisfied with the way I ran the first half of the second mile," Roy noted.

"With a half-mile to go, there was such a gap between the leaders and the rest of us, it was difficult to get any acceleration. I might have run faster if there had been some one closer to me."

Kissin's 8:56.2 is especially noteworthy since his competition to point had been completely without the sort of intensity brought here by Hulst and Serna.

"I'm just not sharp enough yet. I can bring my time down a lot," said Roy, whose previous seasonal (and lifetime) best had been 9:03.6 at the EBAL meet three weeks ago. In the interim, he had won the Division II and North Coast Section meets, both leisurely outings.

Kingery placed fourth in 8:57.3, followed by Richard Agguire of Santa Barbara (9:00.1) and Don Fritzke of Leigh (San Jose).

San Ramon's Lisa Bee narrowly missed third place in the girls discus, throwing 119-10.

The event was won by Betty Smith of Corcoran, with 126-1. Second went to Terry Prince of Anderson, who threw 120-10. Debra Haynes of Edison (Stockton) edged Bee with 119-11. All other EBAL contestants failed to qualify for yesterday's final round.

"Our kids were awed," said Granada coach Bill Wooten of his girls' performances in Friday's trial round.

Shotputter Cheryl Common threw 34-2½, well behind low qualifier Julie Flynn of La Canada.

Diana Stohr finished sixth in her 440 heat with 60.1. Kathy Honour went 17-0¾ in the long jump, not far behind King City's Sandy Ferreira, who had 17-4.

San Ramon's mile relay team moved up to fourth place when Castlemont of Oakland was disqualified, but their 3:24.3, was well off Mt. Pleasant's 3:21.8, third place qualifying time in heat three.

San Ramon discus thrower Mike Bowles dropped from last weeks' 154-2 with a 142-6 toss, far below what was needed to qualify.

Other EBAL casualties included low hurdler Corrine Oldroyd of Monte Vista and the Granada girls 440 relay team.

The State championship went to Harry Ells of Richmond, which totaled 22 points to defeat Pasadena (16), Newport Harbor (14), Villa Park (10) and Skyline of Oakland (9).

Ells was led by the incomparable Dedy Cooper, who won the 330 low hurdles in 36.5 and anchored both winning relay teams.

Cooper placed second in the 120 high hurdles, losing by inches to Robert Gaines of Kennedy (Richmond). Both were timed in 13.3. Ted Brock

New SR pro Smith drives for distance

STEVE SMITH
Succeeds Rod Thompson.

Steve Smith threw a few cases of saleable merchandise in the back seat of his automobile Thursday evening and drove non-stop from Pomona to the Bay Area to take up residence as head golf pro for San Ramon National Golf Course.

Though shelves and sales counters were strewn over the clubhouse, intermingled with the miniscule inventory he rescued from his last job, Smith was pressed into service first thing Friday morning.

Before he was even able to verify the spelling of his new home town, he was behind a counter learning names and faces of new customers.

"I first heard about this job Tuesday," said Smith, a native Southern Californian, on his first day at work.

"They said they wanted someone right away, and it was either going to be me or somebody else. So I flew up here Wednesday and saw the course for the first time, then I made my decision Thursday and drove up."

San Ramon has functioned without a head teaching professional, and without a pro shop for two weeks since Rod Thompson abruptly quit Memorial Day weekend. He terminated a three-year courtship with the National Golf Club chain over a salary dispute.

The search for a replacement began four days after Thompson's departure, and wound up Wednesday, when management offered to promote Smith, an assistant pro at three National courses in the Pomona-Orange County vicinity.

"From what I've seen so far, I like the area and I like the people," Smith said. "And the course is really nice. The people running it are professionals, and the place has always done well. It was an opportunity for me."

Steve, 32 and single, has been in golf management for 13 years, and became a PGA club professional a year and a half ago. He's run golf shops in the past, but this was his first chance at his own operation.

"There was no pressure to take the job," Smith said. "It was just a matter of did I want it, and could I handle it."

Smith has been a golfer for 20 years, and competed for the Chaffey College team. He qualified for San Diego State's squad, but was drafted into the army before he could enroll.

MIKE ZAMPA, editor

Garrigan gem and Bevilacqua HR win

Pleasanton's Senior Babe Ruth baseball team did the expected and lessened the worry over its questionable area for a surprisingly easy 14-3 victory over Hayward yesterday afternoon.

"We've got the ability to score runs," said coach Larry Boldrini in reference to his team's pennant chances, "if our pitching comes through, we'll be up there." The pitching came through yesterday as Mike Garrigan, who hurled for Amador Valley High in the spring, got his assortment of breaking pitches over the plate to gain a complete game victory.

Garrigan allowed just five hits and three walks.

The hitters were, as predicted, out in force.

While Boldrini was quick to point out that Hayward was probably suffering from "opening game miseries" and made numerous misplays in the outfield, Pleasanton's slugging was the major contributor to its overwhelming run total, of which seven came in a hectic fifth inning.

Ed Bevilacqua, who will start the first game of today's home doubleheader with Castro Valley, smashed a three run homer to pace the P-town attack while infielders Mike Johnson, who also cracked a single, and Bob Koopman belted triples.

Ken Dalrymple and Brett Boldrini both had doubles. Shortstop Greg Bellinger came through with a pair of singles for the Amador-oriented club.

While Rob Wicks, who starts the other game of today's twinbill was a member of the Dons regular pitching rotation in months past, the oldest of the baseball-playing Bevilacqua brothers will be somewhat of an unknown quantity.

"Ed's not overpowering, so he has to rely on getting the ball over the corners of the plate," said the senior Boldrini, adding that Bevilacqua comes equipped with a better-than-average knuckle ball.

However, he hasn't pitched since his junior season in high school ball and, says coach Boldrini, "If his inactivity causes him to throw the ball too close to the middle of the plate, he might be in trouble."

Modestans steal best ball golf show

A pair of teams from Modesto's Dryden Park stole the show yesterday in the third annual Livermore City Two-Man Best Ball Golf Championships at Las Positus Golf Course.

Action took place yesterday in the first and second flights and will conclude today. Next weekend will feature the Championship Flight with 144 players entered.

Phil Mastagni and Manny Fagundes fired an amazing 16 under par 56 to open up an almost insurmountable five-stroke lead in the first flight.

Mastagni, a 7-handicapper, scored birdies on the eighth, twelfth and fifteenth holes while Fagundes, a 14-handicapper, birdied the second, seventh and eighteenth holes to highlight their sparkling round.

Low scores are nothing new to Mastagni and Fagundes as they placed second in the 1973 tournament and 11th last year. Mastagni, meanwhile, won the 1972 City Championship and placed fourth in 1974.

A distant five shots back was the father and son team of Bill and Mike Lewis of Las Positas. Also at 61 was the Hayward golf course duo of Bill Herron and Steve Roberts.

Herron, who plays to a nine handicap, shot a fine one over par 73 on his own ball.

Duane Bartles and Pete Vanderwall, both of Manteca, were the third group tied at 61.

At 62 was the Las Positas tandem of Don Waltear andRay Lablow. Doc Welch and Bill Fitz of Dryden Park checked in at 62 still within striking distance of the leaders.

Bolstered by a fantastic nine under par 27 on the tricky Las Positas front nine, Charles Atchison and Don Parolni opened up a one stroke lead in the second flight with a 57.

Play will resume today with the winners of each flight crowned with a new trophy and $200 in prize money.

Hill keeps hitting them out

Glen Hill continued his torrid home run pace last week and the Pleasanton Jaycees continued to win in the Pleasanton National senior league, thumping Romley's Market, 11-2.

The Phillies, who led, 5-1 after four innings, broke things open in the bottom of the fifth with a six-run outburst. Hill underscored the rally with a grand-slam. He has now homered in every game he has played. Hill had four hits and six runs-batted-in, and also doubled.

Winning pitcher Dave Negron collected three hits including a double, and two RBI's. Bill Hurll drove in two runs on two singles. Teammate Mitch Perereia stole his 21st base of the season.

In the major leagues, Valley Realty yielded four runs to Irby's Dairy in the top of the sixth inning, but survived for a 7-5 victory. Eric Whalen made it close for the Pirates by crashing a three-run home run in that sixth inning. Stephen Gray drove in a run for the winners. The Reds played errorless defense.

Gene's Interiors of the Triple A, scored twice in the last of the sixth inning for a 9-8 win over Western Airlines. Jeff Stimpson and John Ayres hit doubles for the Reds. The Pirates' Joe McBride tripled and drove in two runs.

John Duesterhaus' super pitching helped the Double A Reds to a 10-0 whitewash of the Pirates. Duesterhaus allowed three hits and struck out 12. He also crashed an inside-the-park home run. Teammates Ryan Rosowicz and Joe Madden doubled. Tony Echavia and Adam Wakeling played fine defense.

In Single A, Dave Crocke singled home Dale Yahrmatter in the bottom of the fourth inning to hand the Reds a 12-11 win over the Pirates. Yahrmatter had four RBI's in the game, and Mike Duesterhaus had two. Ed Wipfli of the Pirates drove in three runs.

Jerry's Exxon jumped away to a 9-1 lead after three innings and coasted to a 10-5 Pleasanton National senior league victory over Pleasanton Garbage Wednesday.

Steve Parker singled and hit a solo home run for the winning Reds. Dave Albert had three hits, and Mark Gabrielson, two.

Mark Pune hit two homers for the losers, and Robin Dijos had four base hits.

The Twins' Mark Hallum belted a two-run home run.

In Triple A, Dolan Lumber defeated Phil's Chevron, 21-2. Mike Schnorr picked up his fifth win, and the 13th in succession for Dolan. Schnorr and Randy Isaacs each drove in four runs. Mark Wolfenberger and Vince Wheeland each had two RBI's.

Double A Valley Ave. Seven-Eleven unleashed a 16-hit attack last week to clobber Marshall Perry Realty, 25-15 in Pleasanton American baseball.

Stu Maestas paced the Yankees with a double and three runs-batted-in.

Mike Keyser had three RBI's for the Orioles.

Granada

Red Wing Shoes stormed to its 16th straight triumph of the Granada major league season last week, and handed VFW its first defeat in the second half of the year by a 12-0 count.

Power-hitting Jeff Baker drove in four runs for the Cardinals with a single and two doubles. Kevin and Jack Trudeau each had two runs-batted-in.

The Trudeaus shared the pitching chores and blanked VFW on four base hits. Randy Grant had one of those hits, a double. Jessie Velasques singled twice.

Serv-Pro defeated Columbus Realty, 8-2, on the seven hit pitching of John Seichter and Mark Wagner. Steve Bogden paced the Serv-Pro offense with two singles. Terry Zaragoza of Columbus also had two hits.

Groth Bros. came back from a one-run deficit with six runs in the fourth inning to trip Granada Shopping Center, 10-5. David Brown's two-run triple was a key hit for the winners. Craig Lyons and Jeff Azevedo doubled. Scott Macias had two RBI's for the losers.

Corrine's scored 10 times in the final three innings to overtake Granada Pharmacy, 12-9 Troy Fernandez crashed a two-run triple.

Granada's Fred Stayton homered.

Auto Plus rallied for three sixth inning runs in the Granada farm league Wednesday and overhauled Amador Styling, 6-5.

Jeff March's three-run home run accounted for all of the Auto runs in the thrilling sixth inning. March also crashed a two-run homer in the fourth inning.

Teammate Rodney Schoppe doubled twice for the winners.

Amador's Rick Paul and Tony Saputo both drove in two runs.

Arrow Rentals stopped Astro Rentals on the eight-hit shutout pitching of Jeff Nichols, Kevin Carnes and Jim McLaughlin, 4-0. Nichols drove in three runs with a pair of singles. Tom Dipiallonardo drove in a run with a double Astro's Greg Calder singled twice.

Sports in brief

Feigner fires tonight

The King and His Court softball team featuring superstar pitcher Eddie Feigner, will face the Livermore All-Stars this evening at 6 on the Recreation Center diamond, Eighth and H streets.

Feigner is the originator of the four-man international softball team that has won more than 4,000 games. He is considered the finest pitcher in the sport, with more than 80,000 strikeouts to his credit. More than 16,000 of those came blind-folded.

Tickets for the contest will be on sale at the gate.

Neutrons need $

The Livermore Neutrons are seeking help in raising funds for their trip to the Jr. National Challenge Cup Soccer Championships in Milwaukee next weekend.

The under-19 team is one of four teams entered from an original field of 298 entrants.

The Neutron team is composed of players from the Dublin - Livermore -Pleasanton area.

The squad leaves for Milwaukee Thursday, and will play games Saturday and Sunday.

Anyone wishing to help finance the trip can call 447-6861.

Liquors licks 'em

Val Vista Liquors jumped on Atteberry Insurance pitching for 24 base hits and a 17-1 rout in Pleasanton Women's softball.

Gloria Watson homered for the Liquor team, and Lorraine Demmel drove in five runs. Linda Collins and Mary Weaver each had three RBI's.

Weaver pitched a six-hitter with six strikeouts. Carol Verboon had two of the hits against Weaver.

Don girls tops

Final corrected standings for the EBAL girls softball season were released last week, but no amount of change could topple Amador Valley High from the top spot.

The Don varsity won the league crown with a 10-0 record. Dublin and Monte Vista tied for second at 6-4. San Ramon was third with a 4-6 mark. Foothill followed at 3-7, and Granada finished last at 1-9.

San Ramon topped the junior varsity standings with a 9-1 mark, two games ahead of Amador at 7-3. California and Foothill both posted 5-5 marks. Dublin finished at 3-7, and Monte Vista, 1-9.

A peak at future pools

The pool industry is expected to proliferate even more in years to come, but no one seems to know for sure what pools of the future will look like.

More exotic chemicals for bacteria control also are being developed. Trichlorals and dichlorals are being experimented with. Soon, the pool owner's greatest nemesis, algae, may be as rare as a pool that isn't 100 percent automated.

There's also the possibility that in the future, cement pools will be replaced by a less expensive synthetic material. "You're starting to see more vinyl liner pools," said Bob McBeth, a Phoenix pool builder. "These are becoming very popular in the East because they are substantially less expensive and as construction costs continue to rise, Phoenix is going to demand a product less expensive."

But Howard Stern, another pool company executive, disagreed. "Personally I feel that the gunite pool will always have the greatest acceptance by the public. These so-called space age materials don't really make an impression on customers."

Water safety class is slated

PLEASANTON - A water safety program, designed to help parents prevent backyard pool tragedies, will be held at the Pleasanton Recreation Center at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday.

This free, informational session is being sponsored by the Pleasanton Recreation Department, the Pleasanton Fire Department and the National American Red Cross.

A special informational mailing has been made to the more than 1,000 Pleasantonites who have backyard pools. It is the goal of the sponsoring groups to make backyard pool safety a reality and to make all community members safer in and about the water.

The safety program will include information and demonstrations on mouth-to-mouth artificial respiration and an opportunity for participants to practice mouth-to-mouth on "Resusa Annie."

A fire department representative will speak on the role of the fire department in community safety and will give information on first aid. Water Safety Instructor Sue McAllister will also demonstrate simple rescue techniques and will present vital information to make your pool area and water outings safer.

The Recreation Center is located adjacent to the pool on Black Avenue

Bill Ridenour and Lynn Walter display the 1,000 notices of the pool safety night that are being mailed out this week

Landscaped patio pool

Luxurious backyard

This pool, with broad stretches of patio, decking and a wading pool in the rear is an outstanding example of how careful landscaping combined with a pool can produce a highly attractive outdoor area which is as easy to maintain as automatic pool equipment can make pool care today and much more beautiful than a mundane lawn or garden.

Pooling ideas

by Bob Anglin

For many different reasons, people are now seriously considering ways to make their homes more livable and enjoyable. The addition of a swimming pool in their yard is becoming "the" thing to do. We in the industry are often asked, "Does this make economic sense?" In general, the answer is yes for most neighborhoods in this area.

Total pool installation are now costing approximately $7,000 to $9,000 with long term bank financing, resulting in payments of from $80 to $100 per month. Gunite pools are as permanent as the home itself, and with proper landscaping can be resold with the house, many times at a profit to the seller. Therefore, installing a nice pool in your yard is not too bad and investment.

Probably, their greatest value lies in the enjoyment and healthful excercise one gets with their own pool. It is estimated a person swimming burns up about 11 calories per minute. That should even help a person who is weight watching or reducing.

Most reliable pool companies are prepared to discuss such ideas with you in detail, if such a thing appeals.

Vandalism destroys each one of us

The complaint is not new, but for those closest to the scene it is story of wanton waste that always cries out for an answer.

"Our Little League parks are being destroyed ... every week it's a fence ripped out, or the snack shack broken into ... if this kept up there might not be a Little League Ball Park, in another year or two." He came to this newspaper not to file a complaint, but in pursuit of help ..."some idea as to what we might do, where we might turn."

The tragedy is that the young people who are served by these facilities are also responsible for destroying them. But it is the adults — those who care and who contribute — who are left with the debris of that vandalism.

"It gets so terribly discouraging, after a while," this one Little League booster was saying. "No one can stand the pressure for more than a year or two. You have to break away from it just to keep your perspective."

But we cannot break away from the town we share, the children we raise, the programs we would provide. Baseball for boys and girls is only one such program offered throughout the valley.It has been estimated that 10,000 young people profit from such organized sports in the valley's three urban centers. It is a tremendous undertaking, achieved at considerable cost in time and energy for those who make it happen.

The destruction of a $500 fence is not going to also destroy the whole program. But it can be that one wound in an orgy of waste that leaves good people wondering "why bother?".In their frustration they cry out for more police patrols "as one way to curb vandalism." That is an expensive answer, but one still worth considering. There are other things we could do, short of calling out the cops, to bring young people into better understanding of the community they share, and the activities made available to them.

"If only we could launch some sort of orientation program in the schools ... involve the city police and the recreation people ... help all of us identify with the town right around us." Again, our visitor's suggestion is not all that new, but it is always worth a fresh approach.

We are a society inclined to spend our way out of trouble. Build the Youth Center ... finish the park ... hire the cops ... pay the fine. Most of us would prefer to give up five dollars in added taxes, than spend five minutes of our time in meaningful dialogue ... with young people, with neighbors, or with the authorities.

And so we watch the newly planted trees being slashed, the fresh turf gouged by motorbikes, the ball park fence uprooted. And we wonder ... "Why doesn't somebody do something about this kind of thing?"

When do you intend to start?

Herlihy on 'open space'

In a recent exchange of views involving The Times and leaders of PARC (Preserve All Area Ridgelands Committee), Margaret Tracy stressed PARC's "commitment to work with the ranchers" in preservation of large tracts of open space along those East Bay ridges. The following comment on that PARC position comes from Vice Mayor Wm. Herlihy of Pleasanton, an acknowledged champion of parks and open space preservation throughout the East County.

Dear Editor:

I noted recently in the local press that the PARC movement now claims to have multijurisdictional support. The campaign to "preserve area ridgelands" and "is deeply committed to working with ranchers ..." is an admirable position. Yet, when one delves into the inter-philosophy of the committee, an entirely different facade emerges.

It became apparent to me in December of 1973 that 'working with the rancher' for the promotion of an open space plan meant opposing any and all development including rumors of development. During the past 18 months this same group has opposed the development of a commercial recreational area on Apperson Ridge on the basis that 'the Apperson dude ranch if approved would set the stage for a whole string of similar recreational ventures.' There is no factual data to support this claim. This can be referred to as emotional arm-waving and foolish speculation. And we can easily become involved in a "what if " debate.

The original concept put forth early in 1973 envisioned an open space and park system that would tie together the East Bay Regional Park System with Sunol Regional Park. This system would be immediately adjacent to the cities of Hayward, Berkeley, Oakland, etc. The goal was to make available to a large segment of the East Bay population a linear park system that would be readily available to them via public transportation. I believe this to be a creditable plan. Condemnation of private property was not to be considered except in the most exceptional circumstances, because in the development of large open space park systems, large acreages are involved. Planners can easily go around property not available for the park.

The plan was to be a mutual participation project between the public and the rancher. Remember, this is primarily cattle country and not wilderness land as we are led to believe by the PARC campaigners. To the owner of the land, it is productive, provides an income and may well be the site of his home. These I want to respect.

PARC's campaign appear to address itself to all the available grazing land east of the bay-10's of thousand of acres. I shudder at the ultimate cost of such a monstrous scheme. I would suggest that the original concept, which by comparison was most modest, has now been prostituted to the point that it is no longer a creditable and responsible open space project.

I believe that development of parks and open space are crucial to improving the quality of living in Pleasanton and the East Bay and I will continue to vigorously support responsible park planning and acquisition. Large open spaces are as essential to our living environment as Pleasanton's city park system.

Vacant schools 'for rent'

CONTRIBUTED

As school districts look more closely at their budgets in this time of inflation and declining enrollment, the ax is starting to fall on underused and underfunded school buildings.

The taxpaying public has, through bonds and local taxes, spent hundreds of millions of dollars to construct educational facilities which are no longer needed or economically supportable.

Enrollment in districts all over the state is declining at a rate of from two to 10 per cent. For each 200 drop in the number of children, a district loses approximately $180,000 yearly in state aid.

It's a sad situation, because if districts begin selling off excess land and buildings, they may never be replaceable. The high cost of property and construction would make the price of rebuilding today's educational facilities almost prohibitive.

Predictions are that children born during the "baby boom" of the fifties are now of child-bearing age, and the cycle of high birth numbers could be set off again — creating a crunch for school districts in five to 10 years.

So, districts around the state are looking for ways to put those facilities to good, albeit temporary, use until they get a better feel for how many students they will have to provide for in the future.

Not many kinds of enterprises can make use of a school complex with its number of relatively small rooms and only corridor access. Earthquake standards forced districts to construct schools with strong inner and outer walls — adding to the problem and costs of remodeling for alternate uses.

Alum Rock School District in San Jose is negotiating leases with the city of San Jose, the local adult education program and the county office of education for use of individual classrooms in several schools. Trustees elected to lease out some 18 to 20 classrooms rather than close an entire school.

Other districts — Los Angeles Unified is one example — have attempted to lease schools on the outer edges of the city to surrounding districts that might have need for additional schools. Both these approaches eliminate the immediate cost of upkeep while retaining the facility should it be needed in the future.

Districts and cities throughout the state have also begun to look at the school facilities in other than an educational light, considering instead the many social needs of the general public. One idea oft proposed is to convert them into community and senior citizen centers.

Look at the basic California school building. The administration complex offers ample office and clerical space for the operations staff of any community program, and comes complete with all the equipment needed to run an office operation.

Parking is no problem even for large events, because of the ample playground and open space surrounding most schools. School facilities also have cafeterias and auditoriums that can be used for meal functions, dances, meetings or concerts. Classrooms specifically designed for music or crafts activities fit right into the varied purposes of a community center.

The hire and maintenance of staff and utilities is all that would be required in most cases. The largest economic block to starting such community programs — i.e., site acquisition and construction costs — is immediately overcome.

It's ironic to think that facilities built by taxpayers' dollars to teach and enrich their youngsters can be used to teach and enrich the very people who paid for them.

It's time for many communities to start looking at their schools, and think of what to do with them now that the big baby boom is over.

Letter to The Times

Times in classroom

Editor, The Times:

This year as in the past two years, the third graders in room 3 at Portola School have used the Valley Times to extend their reading and math skills. This has been possible with the cooperation of your Circulation Manager, Warren Barry. Mr. Barry has had the Wednesday edition of your paper delivered to us weekly in sufficient numbers so that each child could have a copy.

I have found the newspaper to be an excellent teaching tool, and appreciate the support of your company in furnishing the weekly "text."

Perhaps, Mr. Barry will share with you the thank you notes from the children so that you will know how we used the newspapers, and to their thanks I would like to add my thanks as well.

round the town

You have no doubt been following the exploits of the Sheriff of Siskiyou County. The clever undercover work, the dramatic pursuit, the high stakes. It is American law enforcement at it's exciting best. The only difference here is that it's the sheriff everybody's after.

You would have to know and appreciate Sheriff Allan Cottar to comprehend his present problem. Having shared Siskiyou County with Allan when he was a mere Deputy Sheriff, but on his way up, I have real empathy for the current puzzle. Not the man, mind you, just the problem.

The latest misunderstanding began last January, when Sheriff Cottar figured out that a new piece of state legislation regarding pensions for county servants — such as sheriffs — had a fascinating loophole. Briefly stated, it allowed Sheriff Cottar to resign his post, quality for a $1020-per-month pension, then go back on the county payroll six days later at his full salary — $1788 per month. So now he gets both pension and paycheck, and there is very little anyone can do about it ... except pass more legislation making sure it doesn't happen again.

Sheriff Cottar made but one mistake in his double play — he left his office, and his private records, in the hands of Undersheriff Charles Foster for six long days. Foster turned some of the sheriff's records over to state investigators. They suggest some nasty "conflict of interest" things about the sheriff's private business which Cottar would just as soon have kept private.

The sheriff returned (six days after retirement) to fire the undersheriff and four deputies.

The State Attorney General's office took action against Cottar and associates, including an $18,000 civil damages suit alleging conflict of interest. A county judge ordered Cottar to stop accepting "consulting fees" of $500 per month from a local land development company

Enter the Siskiyou County District Attorney, who files criminal echarges .. no, not against Sheriff Cottar and friends, but charging Undersheriff Foster and the four fired deputies with "theft of the sheriff's documents."

Now, if you think I am making all of this up, then it proves you have never lived in Siskiyou County. The Cottar Saga is but one more chapter in the life and times of that Nor-Cal hinterland.

Tulelake was part of Siskiyou County in name only. We didn't trust the sheriff, even then ... and not the county school superintendent, the county road superintendent, the county tax collector, or any of those other shady characters in far-off Yreka. Not that we Tulelakers were above reproach. But —

"We'll take care of our own crookedness," was a statement voiced often by our chief of police. It was almost a fulltime job.

You have to understand that places like Tulelake, Dorris, Weed and even the great city of Alturas were — at least in the early 1950's — somewhat beyond the influence of civilized California. They were also somewhere beyond the law. Or at least the brand practiced by "big city folks."

Much of Northern California was in another world, judicially speaking, in those carefree days. We took care of our own sins — gambling, prostitution, farm labor kickbacks, crooked law officers and the like — and the rest of the world left us alone. That was "the understanding."

The important thing was to understand "the understanding." As a youngish, somewhat naive journalist, I had not been clued in, not in my early days with the Tulelake Reporter. A column, (somewhat livelier than this suburbanized edition) took pleasure in pointing out the shortcomings of our localites. The readers loved it. Until I let slip a casual comment on the "busy one-armed bandit in the Legion Hall." Then all hell broke loose.

"We never, NEVER mention anything about gambling or slot machines in this town," I was firmly advised. "THAT'S THE UNDERSTANDINGe" I was beginning to understand.

My education was fully accomplished the day Porter's grocery store caught fire. It was one of just two such outlets in town, and carried all of life's essentials, including the mix. The entire town responded to the fire whistle, but it was readily apparent that the building would soon be engulfed in flame, despite our heroic efforts. Then a cooler, wiser head prevailed.

"SAVE THE WHISKEYe" he ordered. Which we did, at considerable threat to life and limb, I might add.

The effort left us with a terrible thirst, which we proceeded to squelch by consuming the aforementioned beverages. It was, oldtimers tell me, "the town's most glorious drunk."

That is the kind of scene Sheriff Al Cottar would understand. I am surprised he got mixed up in all this high finance. It's way out of his league.

Sound and Fury

Walt Hecox

We sat in the sky room on the 12th floor of the Marines Memorial Club in San Francisco and drank wheat squeezings neat while we talked about the girls in Numea and the girls in Pago Pago and Aukland and some in San Diego.

We had been together all night by then and were almost accurate when we called each other Pete or Joe or Chuck, as was the case with Chuck Muth of Pleasanton who was the real reason I had arrived on the scene.

He had called late Sunday, introducing himself as an insurance adjuster who lives in Dublin and who had been kind enough to read this piece for some time.

"I understand you were with the Third Marines and were on Bougainville Island in November, 1944," he said.

"I was there," I told him. "Right up until November 24th when the war ended quite suddenly for me."

"We are having a little reunion in the Patriots room of the Marines Memorial Club," he told me. "I understand by your column you were attached to the Marines and with L Company on the 24th.I thought you might like to come."

L Company was reduced from a husky total of 165 men to seven on the 24th of November, 1943. I thought it might be nice to see how many of the men wounded that day were still alive.

Wednesday I went to the Marines Memorial Club and entered the Patriot's room, which is the smallest room on the 10th floor. We talked a while about forming a chapter of Third Marines' Association in San Francisco.

Then we adjourned to wheat squeezings in the Sky Room on the 12th floor and talked about the girls in Warkworth, in Pango Pango and the sly grogger's joint Tony the Greek ran on Karangahapi Road in Aukland.

I sat and listened for the most part, not that I didn't remember any girls, I just don't like to talk about them.

We had lunch at the club and drank martinis before and Tom Collins after, just the way we were supposed to and went back to the sand and I went to sleep watching her smile, her hair long, not straight like the young girls have it today, but waving gently and reaching all the way down to her hips.

The sun was low when I awakened and we both dashed once more into the curling surf and I never, not once in all that time, looked at my feet.

. While we sat in the sky room talking I remembered the girl with the long hair and the hazel eyes and knew it was because I had known women like her.I had never needed the Pink House in Numea or any of those heavy chested lassies on Pago Pago who were topless without knowing they were exposing anything unusual.

I looked at my feet all right in the Marine recruiting office and I couldn't believe what I saw and when I did I knew further talk was useless because no one would believe a man could sleep sound enough to let a girl paint all ten toenails bright red without ever waking up.

Of twelve of us who had shown up two had been former pill rollers, which is the most polite word I can use for pharmacists' mates, and the other had driven all the way up fromWatsonville and had to go home early. They sat there talking in Marine language and I remembered I had never become quite completely educated in their jargon.

At Aukland we marched ashore with full packs and, because of the way the streets were laid out, we went off rear end first, which put the lieutenant and I in front. But we did well enough for a while, marching along a backstreet by the waterfront while the crowd cheered.

ThenI marched, head high and proud, eyes straight ahead, warmed by the cheers and hardly heard the sergeant hiccup.

Then the cheers cooled off some and the crowd quieted and I wondered what was wrong and why the sound of marching feet seemed to be fading.Then I heard the lone voice in the crowd.

"Blimey, mate, they've all gone off in the other direction. You're all alone, you know."

There wasn't much to say while they talked about the girls near New River, North Carolina and the girls in Pearl Harbor and the old China marine told us about the Chinese lassies, if that is the right word. I had been faithful to the girl at Stanford University whom I had married just before I left and I have never regretted my foolishness thoughshe did not return the favor, did not return the favor at all.

"You can't really blame me," she had said when I arrived home. "When you come right down to it, the war was harder on the girls staying behind than it was on you fellows over there with all the action."

The runner screamed at the top of his lungs.

He did it again and again. He was from my company. I stood up and tightened my pack straps. When I got to the edge of the clearing the kid was still yelling.

"Shut your goddam mouth or I'll never come out there," I told him. It wasn't that I minded the yelling, I just didn't want a lot of Japanese to have their attention focused on that clearing.

He shut up immedieatly and I started into the clearing, the mud sucking at my feet so I ran in slow motion. About halfway to the kid I felt the sting, a huge bee with a red hot stinger a quarter of an inch in diameter burn a hole through my leg and heared the crack of the rifle. Then I was lying flat on my back and cursing. I rolled over and tried to fire my carbine but it was jammed with mud. I kept right on cursing.

We sat on the 12th floor of the Marines' Memorial Club and the fellows talked about the girls from Wellington and Puhoi and a lot of other places. I didn't have any girls to talk about because I had remained faithful to the one who found the war much harder on her than on the fellows out in the mud and gore.

Of course she was right you know. It was very exciting out there. Very, very exciting.

For Sunday, June 8, 1975

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You're very personable today. People will enjoy listening to you. You don't need to add luster by throwing in a few phony facts.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Be generous today, but only to those who are deserving. Don't be a patsy for a habitual freeloader.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your intentions are sincere in dealings you may have today. Just be certain the other party is on the same wavelength.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You'll be on the receiving end of some material benefits today. Someone who learns of your good fortune won't be as happy for you as she pretends.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Today, you'll be the center of attraction. Share the limelight. Bring a shy friend into the act.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You will benefit through your own merit or skills. Don't let a Johnny-come-lately con you out of part of what you've earned.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) It's safe to open up in front of friends today. But avoid talking about confidential matters in front of a casual acquaintance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You'll have an opportunity today to profit through another. If you don't handle things with serious forethought, you could lose out.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Discuss any situations involving a partnership early in the day. Later, your thinking won't be nearly as clear.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You might want to get together today with people involved in your work or career. But bringing in an outsider would derail things.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Members of the opposite sex will find you very attractive today. One who never seemed to notice before will be taking a good, long look at you.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Entertaining at home today? Shoo everybody home after a reasonable time, or you'll be stuck with some boring hangers-on.

Charlie Brown & Joanne Clutinger Report From Century 21 Conference

Joanne Clutinger and Charlie Brown of CENTURY 21, CHARLIE BROWN REALTORS, have recently returned from Newport Beach where they attended a Century 21 Managers' Conference. In attendance were over 600 Century 21 Brokers and Managers from New Mexico, Arizona, Colorado, Oregon, Washington, British Columbia and California.

Although turned off by the uncomfortable fog in the southland, Mrs. Clutinger and Mr. Brown were definitely turned on by the subjects discussed at the conference.

"In addition to talking about every aspect of real estate in general," said Mr. Brown, "the managers spent a great deal of time discussing CENTURY 21's International Referral System. The three basic elements necessary for a successful home sale are getting the most for your home, getting it in the shortest time, and getting it with the least inconvenience."

"Exposure, maximum exposure, of the home for sale is decidedly the most important aspect of a successful sale," Brown continued, "and our International Referral System does provide this maximum exposure. With this system a buyer for your home may at this moment be boarding a plane in Philly. With over 50,000 families a year moving to California and with over 1,200 Century 21 offices in the U.S. and Canada, a client who has sold his property in the east and has cash in his hand and is referred to a local Century 21 office may be "the" most potential buyer for your home."

Another topic discussed at the Conference was Century 21's excellent training program. Mrs. Clutinger remarked that "all agents joining Century 21, whether new or experience, attend training programs which include expert guidance in the areas of time management, prospecting, communications, financing, escrow procedures and the referral program. In addition, there are quarterly seminars on everything from taxation to financing, which up-date the agents on every aspect of real estate."

Valley teacher honored

LIVERMORE — Fourth grade teacher, Mrs. Joan Gaster of Marylin Avenue School, was selected as a finalist in a statewide contest for fourth grade students and teachers. The contest, sponsored by Northern California Savings and endorsed by the State Bicentennial Commission, had as its goal, not only to increase interest in the Missions of California, but to work towards their complete restoration, preservation and maintenance.

Because California history is a unit of study at fourth grade level, schools were encouraged to sponsor contests. Student winners at Marylin Avenue School included Danny Marciel, drawing; Wade Graham, photo; Jennifer Kirschten, essay and Robert Duncan and Carol Reed, Mission models. Mrs. Gaster won the photo contest for teachers.

School winners were then judged at a Regional Contest held in Castro Valley.

Authorized wall painting

Joy Shimabuku, Steve Engerbrick, Keith Bennett and John Steinle all eighth grade students of Harvest Park School, Pleasanton, had loads of fun writing on the walls. Their type of writing was in the form of beautifying the school walls and making them more attractive. The mural painting and art work was under the direction of Mr. Franking, art teacher at Harvest Park. Others working on the project but not shown in the picture are: Steve Kent, Ken Whitaker, Greg Danska and Kelly Doherty.

Supervisors vote bridge funds while protesting system unfair

Alameda County Bureau

By a 3-1 margin, the Alameda County Board of Supervisors voted yesterday to take $100,000 each year from the cities in the county and use it to maintain the Miller-Sweeney Bridge from Oakland to Alameda.

Mayor Jack Maltester of San Leandro, representing the county Mayors' Conference, said "We would reluctantly agree to the maintenance of the new bridge" but added later that "we feel it's unfair".

Supervisor John Murphy felt that the county should not subsidize the three bridges from Oakland to Alameda since the main benefit from the bridges goes to the citizens of those two cities. He would like to see the $430,000 that the county spends to maintain those bridges come from the cities involved as well as the county.

Although the total maintenance figures were not at issue, the $100,000 to maintain the bridge built in 1971 by the Army Corps of Engineers was since the supervisors agreed four years ago that the annual maintenance cost should come from the gas tax money that the state gives to the cities.

Each year, certain portions of the gas tax money collected in the state is sent to local bodies. The Alameda County Mayors' Conference has traditionally determined which cities get what amounts by a formuLa involving population and street mileage.

In 1971, the Corps of Engineers agreed to build a bridge from Oakland to Alameda at Fruitvale Avenue to replace another narrow bridge that was slowly falling apart. At the time, the supervisors decided to support the maintenance of the bridge with money from the cities' share of the gas tax funds Mayors at yesterday's meeting in Oakland claim they knew nothing about such a deal but were willing to accept it, albeit reluctantly.

However, they wanted their present formula for distribution of the funds continued for five years to aid in long range planning. The supervisors, however, voted to extend the formula for only two more years.

Cooper pointed out that the bridge — which cost $4 million — was built for free and if the county had built the structure, the cities' share would be much more than $100,000 a year. Therefore, he felt everyone gained by the deal with the Corps of Engineers.

"Nobody squawked four years ago" said Cooper and the objections of Murphy were overridden when the mayors that had told him they were against it reversed their stand.

"The cost of the crossings between Oakland and Alameda should be borne by the cities of Oakland and Alameda" he said but when when Mayor Tom Kitayama of Union City — who earlier had told Murphy he was against it — spoke in favor of taking $100,000 off the top from the cities allocation, Murphy then sided with Cooper.

The only dissent on the measure came from Supervisor Tom Bates, who felt it was unfair and since he had not been on the board in 1971 when the deal with the Army was made, he had no qualms about voting no.

However, he did state that he was curious about the way the county allocated its money in these times of financiaL difficulties for core cities and said he intended to pursue that more fully when the issue came up again.

Johnson is embarked on a Western Pacific deployment with the 2d Battalion, 4th Marine Regiment, and supporting units which were dispatched to aid in the evacuation.

SR teachers spur drive on pay hike

The familiar chorus of teachers asking for more money was replayed at Monday night's San Ramon Valley Unified School District board meeting, with much the same refrain as similar meetings in other school districts.

The issue , of course, is salary. The district is offering a 2 per cent boost, and the teachers want considerably more to offset the 12.5 cost-of-living increase in the Bay Area this past year.

Bill Woolworth, a teacher and resident of the school district, cautioned the board "We have an educational crisis upon us and you have to handle it before it explodes."

He and the other speakers that followed emphasized that people should be more important than materials and equipment and that the board should reorder its priorities.

Teachers estimate the 2 per cent raise will add about $5 a month to their paychecks and Gerald Cerri, a SRVUSD teacher and resident, told the board how he has to moonlight for over five years.

"I feel like a resident of Rossmoor on a fixed income" he said .

The board gave little response to the statements emanating from the packed house, but a meet-and-confer session between the district and the Certificated Employes' Council(CEC), which represents the teachers, took place later in the week .

Superintendent Allan Petersdorf admitted, however, "We don't know where we're going from here."

Valley graduations to start Wednesday

Graduation ceremonies for intermediate schools and high schools throughout the valley will take place this coming week, with the first ceremonies set to get underway on Wednesday.

Valley High School heads off the older crowd's graduations with an8 p.m. ceremony Wednesday night at the Pleasanton Hotel.

Amador High's ceremony will start at 6:30 Thursday night at the Fairgrounds with Dublin High scheduled for the same evening, but a half hour later on the Gael football field.

Del Valle High School's graduation is set for the Livermore High Student Union at 8 p.m. on Thursday, with Livermore and Granada both planning theirs on Friday the 13th.

Granada's will start at 6 p.m. on the football field with Livermore starting an hour later on its football field.

Four junior high schools will hold graduation on June 11, with Harvest Park getting the earliest start — 6:30 p.m.at the Fairgrounds. Pleasanton Elementary School will follow at the Fairgrounds at 7:30, with Nielsen School and Dublin School going at the same time at their respective campuses.

Livermore intermediate schools will all hold graduation on June 12. Mendenhall School will begin at 12:30 p.m., East Avenue will go at 1:45 p.m. and Junction School will hold off until 7 p.m.

So valley residents can expect to hear the strains of "Pomp and Circumstance" wafting from schoolyards late this week. It's not the return of Gilbert and Sullivan, but simply another group of students moving on to hopefully bigger and better things.

Registration for summer school set

Registration for summer school in the Dublin School-Nielsen School area and the Murray School-Fallon School area is going on at the schools involved.

The summer school program is for students who will be entering kindergarten through fifth grade next fall. Sixth through eighth graders will attend summer school at Wells.

Further information on the summer school program is available at 828-2551.
